Shirley Franklin was elected the first African American woman mayor of a major southern city in 2002 and served until 2009. During those years, the city experienced unprecedented growth and afforded her the opportunity to partner and collaborate on urban policy challenges including urban planning, economic development and infrastructure. She is best known for advocating for and tackling major government operations and ethics reform, launching the Atlanta Beltline, planning and executing over $5 billion in airport and water infrastructure improvement, leading the acquisition of the Morehouse College Collection of Martin Luther King Jr. Papers, launching the Regional Commission on Homelessness and developing successful business and public sector partnerships and alliances. Aside from her role as a public official, her community service spans over 39 years in Atlanta and includes her active participation in the arts, homelessness and higher education.

She currently serves as the Chairman of the Board of Directors and Chief Executive Officer of Purpose Built Communities and President of Clarke-Franklin and Associates, Inc. She co chairs the United Way of Atlanta's Regional Commission on Homelessness, serves as the Chair of the National Center of Civil and Human Rights and serves on the board of the United Nations Institute For Training and Research (UNITAR). Additionally, Franklin serves on the board of Directors of Mueller Water Products.
